Kenyans Arise! Fight Corruption Now.

The National Anthem

O God of all creation
Bless this our land and nation.
Justice be our shield and defender
May we dwell in unity
Peace and liberty
Plenty be found within our borders

Let one and all arise
With hearts both strong and true
Service be our earnest endeavour
And our homeland of Kenya,
Heritage of splendour,
Firm may we stand to defend.

Let all with one accord
In common bond united,
Build this our nation together
And the glory of Kenya
The fruit of our labour
Fill every heart with thanksgiving

Foreword

Over the last ten years, this country has embarked on fundamental changes relating to fiscal, economic, political, legal and constitutional reforms. Such changes are meant to set a new stage by providing an umbrella framework within which to conduct our individual, corporate, sectoral and national activities. However, after we have re-engineered our institutions and re-written our game rules, no lasting success can be attained if our values, beliefs and manner of operating remain cast in the past. Therefore, we have to consciously and deliberately impart good governance in all spheres of our national life in order to create a vibrant and wholesome environment that will foster socio-economic growth and development and attainment of our individual and collective national aspirations. Good governance will ensure the consolidation and perpetuation of the gains and effects of all these reforms.

On the other hand corruption, being at various points the cause and also the effect of bad governance, can ruin any chance of a bright, prosperous future. It must therefore be prevented and fought effectively-everywhere, by everyone, all the time.

Beyond the emotive rhetoric and activism that has hitherto characterized discussion on the subject of corruption, this National Anti- Corruption Plan offers a practical approach to deal with the problem. The honest, genuine discussions and consultations that culminated in the formulation of the plan are commendable. The multi-sectoral participatory pattern will ensure mutual support and cooperation instead of unnecessary acrimony and antagonism. Should every individual and organization take up their role sincerely as envisaged by the Plan, even a modest effort and alertness can ensure a corruption-hostile environment in a very short time, thereby eradicating corruption or reducing it to insignificant level.

No doubt the greatest strength of this Plan shall derive from its various elements being adopted and adapted to become normal features in our routine activities and transactions. The anticipated regular monitoring and evaluation, periodic consultations and reports, and an annual review forum should enable this nation to adopt, develop and perfect good practices and structures that can ensure a corruption free society from now into the future.

It is noteworthy that the design of this Plan seeks to utilize already –existing facilities and resources. The minimal additional resources that may be needed to intensify the level of fighting corruption should not be an excuse for creating unnecessary new organizations. Instead, partnerships and new initiatives and projects within pre-existing organizations should be the best way to maximize the utilization of available resources and capacity.

Preventing and fighting corruption is every Kenyan’s priority and responsibility. Let us all now engage in these endeavours in earnest and with a sense of urgency, commitment and consistency.

Chapter One

Introduction

1.1 Global Perspective

Corruption can be found in all walks of life ranging from matters involving petty and relatively insubstantial issues to those of great significance and value. It is now widely acknowledged that corruption hinders economic development, reduces social services, and diverts investment in infrastructure, institutions and services available to society and also undermines efforts to achieve planned national targets. Evidence from across the globe confirms that corruption impacts on the poor most devastatingly. The phenomenon fosters an anti-democratic environment characterized by uncertainty, unpredictability, decay in moral values and disrespect for public property, institutions and the rule of law. Corruption reflects a deficit in democracy, human rights and governance that negatively impacts on poverty and human security (United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), 2004).

Corruption has devastating consequences such as wasteful spending, bigger budgetary deficits, greater economic inequality, disinvestment as well as unorthodox trading practices. It has the potential of causing a crisis of confidence that can trigger capital flight and disrupt market patterns and stability.

The international community has become increasingly concerned with the problem of corruption and its negative impact on economic growth and poverty alleviation. In the early 1990s, in the wake of globalisation and increased pressures for improving governance, attention and emphasis started shifting away from traditional neutral public administration reform concerns, to more politically sensitive areas that are at the core of good governance. In efforts to prevent and combat corruption, international financial institutions now usually include aspects of economic good governance, regulatory reform and privatisation in their policy dialogues and lending activities.

Increasingly, international organisations, non-state actors and academic experts on governance have advocated an integrated, comprehensive approach to fighting corruption around the globe. This approach includes: introducing new or amended legislation aimed at reducing public officials' opportunities for rent-seeking in those areas most prone to corrupt practices; building alliances with other governments in the struggle against corruption by signing international anti-corruption agreements and participating in transnational organisations committed to fighting corruption; and the implementation of anti-corruption programmes. These anti-corruption programmes generally may entail: an anti-corruption law, a dedicated agency or inter-ministerial commission, an action plan to implement the programme, and a monitoring mechanism. The justification for encouraging countries to adopt these comprehensive anti-corruption programmes has been not only to develop an integrated framework for policy and institutional reforms, but also to launch a process whereby stakeholders can build a consensus on a strategy for fighting corruption and provide neutral mechanisms to hold governments and organisations accountable for implementing that strategy.

Since its establishment, the United Nations (UN) has been engaged in facilitating co-operation among its member governments against crime. In the last decade, there has been a growing consensus among governments that corruption, in all its many forms, is one of the crimes that governments should address through effective international mechanisms.

Action against corruption is high on the global agenda. The anti – corruption efforts by the international community have led to establishment of global and regional initiatives to fight corruption. These efforts are reflected in the adoption of the following instruments:

- the UN Convention Against Corruption
- the African Union Convention on Preventing and Combating Corruption
- UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime
- UN Declaration against Corruption and Bribery in the International Commercial Transactions
- International Code of Conduct for Public Officials
- The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) Protocol to combat bribery by foreign public officials in international business transactions.

In addressing the problem of corruption, a number of countries in Africa and Asia have developed and implemented anti-corruption initiatives with varying degrees of success. Examples include Botswana, Uganda, Hong Kong and Singapore, among others.

1.2. Local Perspective

Corruption in Kenya can be traced to the country's history. As in other parts of the world, the phenomenon prevailed in this country many years back. Corruption emerged in tandem with the systematic distortion of social-cultural values that governed the African way of life. Virtues such as reverence for elders and people in authority and the traditional African hospitality of gift or token exchange got perverted and were transformed into outright demands for bribes before service could be rendered. Corruption can also be traced to colonialism; a system of governance that was based on and sustained by authoritarianism, injustice, deceit and outright plunder of the country's natural resources. Indeed, such a system provided a perfect environment for the festooning of corruption. Independence came without a fundamental restructuring of the colonial state. This meant that corruption was transmitted into the Independent State.

In the sixties and seventies overt corruption in Kenya thrived due to the opportunities presented by interventionist policies through which the state sought to manage economic life through licensing and other forms of regulation. The political and economic reforms of the late 80's and the early 90's, eliminated many of the earlier opportunities around which corruption thrived. Consequently, the incidence of large-scale corruption targeted revenue collection, property transfers, and access to state funds through state tendering and procurement. Emergence of wanton poor institutional governance, an atmosphere of impunity to the rule of law, low morale and inefficiency - contributed immensely to an environment that enabled corruption to thrive and reach devastating levels. Control of state power meant control of public wealth leading to patronage, looting and bribery.

Today, corruption continues to pose one of the greatest challenges facing Kenya. It continues to undermine good governance and distort public policy, leading to misallocation of resources. It has contributed to slow economic growth as well as discouraged and frustrated both local and foreign investors.

Kenyans now acknowledge the enormity of corruption as a problem and its many consequences. As a show of commitment by the new Government to the fight against corruption, Kenya was the first country worldwide to ratify the United Nations (UN) Convention against Corruption on 9th December 2003 in Mexico. The Government has also signed the AU

Convention on the Prevention and Combating of Corruption and acceded to the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime. The Anti-Corruption and Economic Crimes Act (ACECA) 2003 and The Public Officer Ethics Act (POEA), 2003 were swiftly passed to pave way for the establishment of the Kenya Anti-Corruption Commission (KACC), to spearhead and co-ordinate the fight against corruption in the country and to enhance integrity within the Public Service respectively.

Other important legislation aimed at improving governance include The Privatisation Act, 2005 (to ensure transparent and accountable transfer of public assets), The Public Audit Act, 2003 (setting up the National Audit Commission, the National Audit Office, and generally streamlining the audit function of all public organisations), The Government Financial Management Act, 2004 (consolidating, improving and streamlining key Government financial process previously scattered in separate codes), and The Public Procurement and Disposal Act, 2005 (which aims to make procurement of goods and services by public bodies transparent, accountable and effective).

1.3 The Role of the National Anti-Corruption Plan (NACP)

Before the establishment of the Kenya Anti-Corruption Commission (KACC), initiatives against corruption were isolated, uncoordinated, inconsistent, improperly targeted or conceived, and largely unevaluated. The Plan provides a coordinated approach and unity of purpose in fighting corruption in the Country. All efforts against corruption must be coordinated in a clear and systematic pattern in order to maximize on existing resources, opportunities and structures and in so doing mobilize all Kenyans effectively.

The National Anti-Corruption Plan (NACP) provides for the first time a shared reference point for all anti-corruption initiatives in order to:

- (i) Provide unity of purpose by all those involved in the fight against corruption.
- (ii) Provide guidance to anti-corruption operations.
- (iii) Ensure participation by all Kenyans in preventing and fighting corruption.
- (iv) Provide explicit mechanisms for regularly evaluating initiatives against corruption by all stakeholders.

- (v) Empower Kenyans to reject corruption and foster a corruption intolerant society.
- (vi) Provide a framework within which all stakeholders can plan their activities to contribute towards eradication of corruption.
- (vii) Help direct adequate and consistent attention to all activities geared towards a balanced anti-corruption strategy.
- (viii) Provide a “mapping” of stakeholders and their activities for ease of partnership and networking and
- (ix) Facilitate the mainstreaming of anti-corruption policies, rules and regulations in all aspects of public life.
- (x) Inculcate a culture of ethics and integrity in all aspects of public and private life.

1.4 Scope of the Plan

The scope of this NACP is to prevent and to fight corruption in all its manifestations in all spheres of social, economic and political affairs of the nation. The Plan recognises that corruption is a phenomenon that permeates all sectors of national life and is not unique to some sectors. The Plan draws from the experiences of all Kenyans and recognizes that preventing corruption requires a consistent, coherent, broad-based and collective approach with a long-term perspective.

The Plan seeks to give effect to the main purposes of the UN Convention Against Corruption which are:

- (a) To promote and strengthen measures to prevent and combat corruption more efficiently and effectively;
- (b) To promote, facilitate and support international cooperation and Technical Assistance (TA) in the prevention of and fight against corruption, including in asset recovery;
- (c) To promote integrity, accountability and proper management of public affairs and public property.

In particular the Plan fulfils the Convention's requirements to the effect that each state party shall take such measures as may be necessary to encourage, in accordance with its domestic law, cooperation between public institutions and the private sector including civil society organizations in the fight against corruption.

1.5 Enabling Environment

The Plan will benefit from an increasingly open and vibrant environment characterised by the fact that:

1. Kenyans are now freely talking about corruption on a daily basis and everywhere there is a growing desire to have it eradicated.
2. There is tremendous goodwill among the stakeholders and development partners.
3. The willingness of stakeholders to join in the fight against corruption and improve governance within their jurisdiction using their own resources.
4. The establishment of the Kenya Anti-Corruption Commission (KACC) with mandate to enforce the anti-corruption law as well as spearhead the war against corruption in the country.
5. Other enforcement agencies have been sensitised and are prepared to take a leading role in the fight against corruption.
6. Benefit from the experience of other anti-corruption initiatives by similar agencies in countries in the region and other parts of the world.

The key assumptions of the plan are: -

- a). All stakeholders will devote adequate resources to implement their part of the Plan
- b). Government will give total political support
- c). Stakeholders will have total commitment to the implementation of the Plan

Chapter Two

Corruption in Kenya

2.1. Definition of Corruption

There is no universally accepted definition of corruption. For the purposes of this plan, corruption is perceived to include:

- (i) Abuse of position or office for personal advantage or for the advantage of another person;
- (ii) Bribery, theft, embezzlement and fraud;
- (iii) Evasion of payment of government revenues, taxes, rates, fees and other dues;
- (iv) Practising of nepotism, tribalism, clanism;
- (v) Practising discrimination on the basis of religion, gender or disability;
- (vi) Inversion and distortion of social values including soliciting for and giving sexual and other favours; and
- (vii) Negligence of professional ethics.

2.2. Historical Perspective on the Fight Against Corruption in Kenya

Whilst corruption is a universal problem, it is currently particularly harmful in some developing countries where there may be more opportunities and less resources for controlling it. Corruption exists in all societies to varying degrees and Kenya is not an exception. The country has witnessed corruption since pre – independence days. Corruption has contributed to decline in economic growth, deterioration of infrastructure, inadequate health facilities and drugs, running down of public institutions, and increased poverty incidences, among others. Kenya's economy recorded a negative growth of -0.3 % by 2000 - the worst performance since independence. Currently over 56 percent of Kenyans live below the poverty line. Therefore, efforts to combat corruption directly support goals of eradicating poverty and promoting human security for all and contribute to achieving the UN's global development agenda in several key areas, popularly called the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

National Anti-Corruption Plan

Reports of perception studies in the country indicate that corruption poses one of the greatest challenges in Kenya today. A Survey on Perception of Corruption in Kenya (2002) shows that Kenyans (93%) believe that corruption has caused much harm to the country and that up to 84% have been personally affected by corruption. Transparency International Corruption Perception Index (1998, 2000, 2002, 2003, 2004) shows the performance of Kenya where in 1998 it was placed 73rd out of the listed 85 countries, 1999, 90th out of the 99 countries surveyed, 2000, 82nd out of 90; 2001, 84th out of 91 countries; while in 2002, it ranked 96th out of 102 and in 2003 it was 123rd out of 133. In 2004, the country was ranked 129th out of 146 countries. The Daily Bribery Survey (2002) shows that Kenyans pay an average 16 bribes a month simply to get on with their lives, indicating there is a widespread culture of corruption.

Corruption may be costing Kenya as much as US $1 billion a year, nearly a quarter of annual government spending (Planning and National Development Minister, Kenya- BBC news May 23rd 2003). It should also be noted that failure by the Government to maintain reforms and fight corruption in the 1990s led to donors' suspension of crucial development aid to the country for about a decade.

Anti-corruption measures

Achieving good governance and fighting corruption is amongst the most important challenges that the country faces today. Since colonial times, numerous anti-corruption initiatives, programmes and projects have been introduced in the country.

Official records reveal that some of the earliest efforts to fight corruption in Kenya started in the colonial era in the 1920s. These efforts eventually led to the enactment of The Prevention of Corruption Ordinance (Cap 65) in 1956. This legislation was not out of foresight that corruption was likely to occur in later years but because the phenomenon was then serious enough to warrant a specific law to deal with it. Largely as a result of recognition that the problem had worsened in the 1980s, this law (now an Act) was amended in 1992 to create an Anti-Corruption Squad in the Police Department. However, the squad was active for only a short time and was disbanded in 1995. The Act was again amended in 1997 to create the Kenya Anti-Corruption Authority with investigative and prosecutorial powers. The Authority was in a surprise move declared unconstitutional by a constitutional court in 2000 and subsequently dissolved.

In 1998, Parliament constituted a Parliamentary Select Committee on Corruption. It was broadly mandated to explore the origins, causes and effects of corruption in Kenya and report back to Parliament. The committee's work culminated in a report on corruption in Kenya, which was tabled before Parliament in June 2000. The Committee also proposed an "Anti-Corruption and Economic Crimes Bill (2000)" to replace The Prevention of Corruption Act (Cap 65).

The enactment of The Anti-Corruption and Economic Crimes Act (ACECA) 2003, The Public Officer Ethics Act (POEA), 2003 and the establishment of the Kenya Anti Corruption Commission in May 2003 are some of the new government's measures to fight corruption. The two Acts establish an improved legislative platform for the fight against corruption in the country.

Other measures include the purge on the judiciary through a judicial integrity committee in September 2003. Other anti-corruption entities in the country now include Ministry of Justice and Constitutional Affairs (MOJCA) and a National Anti-Corruption Campaign Steering Committee. The National Anti – Corruption Campaign Steering Committee was launched by the Government in 2004 to spearhead a country - wide anti-corruption awareness-raising campaign and the committee is composed of representatives from government, civil society and the private sector.

In the recent past, various stakeholders have started participating in preventing and fighting corruption. These include the media, NGOs, public and private sector institutions, civil society, religious organizations, professional bodies and associations.

This emergence of various organisations fighting corruption in the country arises from an understanding that no person or organization however powerful or committed can win the war alone. It will require the participation of all individuals and institutions, incorporating a variety of approaches, to overcome corruption. It is with this understanding that the plan has been developed. The plan, therefore, seeks to marshal all the available resources, as well as the concerted efforts of all stakeholders, in order to ensure quick eradication of corruption in our society.

Chronology of national legislative initiatives on corruption

The key legislative initiatives to combat corruption made so far can be summarized as follows:

- 1956 - Enactment of the Prevention of Corruption Ordinance (Cap 65 Laws of Kenya)
- 1992 - Formation of an Anti-Corruption Police Squad by amendment of The Prevention of Corruption Act
- Oct 1997 - Further amendment of The Prevention of Corruption Act, and formation of the Kenya Anti-Corruption Authority (KACA)
- Sep 2001 - Formation of the Anti-Corruption Police Unit (ACPU)
- May 2003 - Enactment of The Anti-Corruption & Economic Crimes Act (ACECA) 2003, leading to the establishment of the Kenya Anti – Corruption Commission (KACC) in late 2004
- May 2003 - The Public Officer Ethics Act, 2003
- 2003 - The Public Audit Act, 2003
- 2004 - The Government Financial Management Act, 2004
- 2005 - The Privatisation Act, 2005
- 2005 - The Public Procurement and Disposal Act, 2005

2.3. Causes and Effects of Corruption

2.3.1. Some Causes of Corruption

It is generally recognized that corruption emanates from two basic conditions namely:

- (a) Erosion and distortion of values.
- (b) Existence of opportunities

One acknowledged cause of corruption is poor governance, which is evidenced by failure of institutions and a lack of capacity to manage society by means of a framework of social, judicial, political and economic checks and balances. Weakness in institutional structures may result in non-implementation and non-enforcement of laws and policies that could otherwise ensure accountability and transparency.

Corruption in public services arises where there is lack of checks and balances on discretionary power or authority. For instance, when public officials have wide authority and little accountability corruption is likely to thrive.

Corruption also tends to thrive where there is poor remuneration or lack of incentives to public officials, worsened by disregard of merit criteria in appointments. Individuals with meagre salaries, who have ample opportunities to be corrupt, and who are unlikely to be caught or not severely punished even if detected are more likely to engage in corrupt practices. However, higher salaries will not necessarily check corruption, unless there is also a strong political commitment to change attitudes, to restore efficiency and meritocracy in public service, and apply punishment and sanctions firmly and fairly.

Poor or selective law enforcement or perceived impunity has for years encouraged corrupt practices. Non-punishment for corruption and economic crimes has for long facilitated corrupt behaviour in this country.

In the past soft social control systems that allow indiscipline and render the citizens passive and not willing to complain about corruption and corrupt practices encouraged corruption. A situation where corrupt activities were tolerated while those who perpetrated corruption were neither punished nor stigmatized created a culture of impunity and entrenched corruption in our society.

Other factors that have contributed to unbridled corruption include; -

- i). Poor leadership
- ii). Political patronage.
- iii). Lack of or Failure to adhere to professional ethics and standards
- iv). Failure to implement recommendations of watchdog institutions
- v). The mentality of not taking care of public and corporate assets and property (Mali ya Umma syndrome) in all sectors.
- vi). Poor planning
- vii). Greed and worship of material things
- viii). Poverty and unemployment or
- ix). Lack of public awareness on the evils and consequences of corruption

2.3.2. Some Effects of Corruption

Corruption is costing the country millions of shillings every year through siphoning off of scarce resources thus diminishing the country's prospects for development. Distortions generated by corruption result in lower investments and economic growth. It is now evident that the consequences of corruption are disproportionately and cruelly borne by the poor who have no resources to compete with those able and willing to pay bribes or to access alternative services. Corruption worsens the welfare of our citizens and also undermines our efforts to achieve national aspirations, and is a primary obstacle in the effective delivery of public services. It also leads to increased inflation and unemployment, further compounding the problem of poverty.

With corruption, there is lack of respect for the rule of law. Enforcement and judicial officers who accept bribes strengthen the hold and influence of criminal and corrupt elements in society. This also diluted the integrity of public officers and institutions.

Overtime this eroded public officials trustworthiness and their authority and ability to govern for the common good. Corruption makes it possible for justice to be subverted and for human rights abuses to go unpunished. When corruption reigns, basic human rights and liberties come under threat and social and economic contracts become unpredictable, resulting in all-round insecurity and instability.

For this country, once a favoured destination, corruption directly resulted in drastically reduced Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) which in turn affected our rate of economic growth. Other "costs" of corruption undoubtedly include: reduced aid flows; loss of tax revenue; and budget shortfalls and lower government expenditure on development and services.

Other well documented effects of corruption and to which most Kenyans are witness include:

- i). Poor infrastructure, sanitation and housing
- ii). Lack of confidence in public institutions
- iii). Brain drain and migration of quality human resources
- iv). Disregard for merit in awarding available opportunities
- v). Poor delivery of services
- vi). Prevalence of insecurity and social unrest
- vii). Demoralization and de-motivation of honest individuals
- viii). Immorality and increased social evils and perversity
- ix). Inability of the public institutions to provide adequate services.

Chapter Three

Objectives of the Plan

3.1. Vision

The vision of the NACP is “towards a just, democratic and prosperous Kenya built on good governance, ethics and integrity”.

3.2. Mission

The purpose of the plan is to marshal the efforts and resources of various stakeholders to promote positive values and standards in order to prevent and combat corruption in Kenya.

3.3. National Anti-Corruption Plan Objectives

The main objective of the National Anti-Corruption Plan is to marshal the efforts and resources of various stakeholders to progressively and systematically reduce – to the extent possible - the causes and the destructive effects of corruption in Kenya. Specific objectives are: -

- a). To transform the situation where corruption was a low-risk high- gain undertaking to one where it is a high- risk low- gain venture.
- b). To involve all organisations and individuals in Kenya in fighting corruption where they are, wherever it is.
- c). To create public awareness of the causes and terrible effects of corruption and the role of the public in its prevention and eradication.
- d). To promote good governance in all organisations in every sector in order to prevent and fight corruption.
- e). To enhance collaboration among Kenyans in ensuring that all corruption cases are reported, investigated and prosecuted properly.

- f). To encourage all organizations and individuals to develop their strategies for preventing and fighting corruption.
- g). To encourage all organizations and individuals to contribute towards the evaluation, improvement and reinforcement of the Plan.
- h). To create an environment where any corrupt activity is seen and expressed as a social aberration.

To accomplish these objectives, the plan provides strategies/actions whose full implementation will require the participation of different actors in the public sector, private sector, civil society, and other stakeholders.

Chapter Four

Key Elements of the Plan

Our success in fighting corruption now, in stopping its reappearance in future, and our ability to perpetually improve our values and standards, will depend on how well at this stage we inter-link all the elements that will ensure good governance takes root now. The various issues at hand are discussed here in summary form for reference to the detailed action plan matrices.

4.1. Macro – Issues

As already acknowledged, corruption is a major hindrance to economic development. Development experts have come to the conclusion that it is impossible to alleviate poverty without first curbing corruption. Economic and social progress, the rule of law and good governance, democratic values, and strong civil society are some of the basic ingredients in building a national integrity system to sustain the fight against corruption in its various forms and at various levels. Therefore for the NACP to be successful, key macro economic issues need to be addressed.

Kenya's economic performance for the last two decades has been dismal. Annual economic growth has averaged less than 3 percent which is not adequate for poverty reduction and sustainable development of the country. The number of people living below poverty line have increased to higher levels (56 percent in 2002). For them to achieve the desired outcomes, poverty eradication programmes as spelled out in the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (PRSP) and the Economic Recovery Strategy Paper (ERS) need to be integrated in the fight against corruption and other reforms. According to the ERS, most of the problems bedeviling Kenya and its people arise from the many years of bad governance and poor economic management. The paper relates the growing poverty, food insecurity, and economic collapse to bad governance. Current statistics however show that the economy has posted a phenomenal growth in the last two years following wide ranging reforms in accordance with the ERS. These gains need to be buttressed and sustained by a bedrock of good governance.

There is also urgent need for the country to adopt a long term perspective as an appropriate framework for promoting sustainable development. Economic planning in Kenya since independence has been limited to 5-year or shorter plans. Indeed, for decades, policy formulation, development planning and management not only in Kenya but also in many African countries have been short-term based and externally determined. The country needs a national vision of where we want to be as a country in, say, 100 years. This vision can be galvanised by involving all people from the grassroots to the national level. A vision of this kind can then be translated into short, medium and long-term plans so that they all fit within the entire framework, encompassing all sectors and synchronizing all national endeavours to induce harmony and synergy.

As part of the global village Kenya needs to march (or run) with the rest of mankind if we are to maximize benefits and advantages possible through increased and intensified interactions and to properly and fully belong to the global society.

There are various global and regional governance Conventions and Protocols to which Kenya is now a party. Although the country has ratified these conventions, they are yet to be domesticated. Non-domestication of these conventions means non-implementation. There is therefore need to translate these conventions into laws and other programmes of implementation.

4.2. Public Sector Reforms

Wide ranging public sector reforms were started in the 1990s with the view to improve efficiency and service delivery. This started with the Voluntary Early Retirement in 1995 where about 60,000 staff left the civil service.

Rationalisation of Ministerial functions followed in 1999 and involved:

- a) Identification of core functions
- b) Specifying mandates of ministries
- c) Staff rationalisation where duplication and overlaps were identified and rectified

The process led to retrenchment of a further 23,000 civil servants in 2000 leaving about 192,000 in Civil Service. Further right-sizing is expected to continue in the next couple of years.

The ministerial rationalization paved way for a strategic planning process and now all ministries and departments have strategic plans under implementation. This has allowed detailed performance oriented work plans with specific outputs and outcomes. These in turn form the basis for performance contracting and performance assessment introduced in 2005.

This Performance contracting aims at;

- (i). Improving service delivery
- (ii). Making accounting officers to be accountable for predetermined results
- (iii). Cascading accountability to all levels to ensure personal direct responsibility
- (iv). Introducing result oriented culture in the service
- (v). Providing objective evaluation of the performance of management and staff
- (vi). Providing for development of service charters for all ministries/departments and state corporations.

In the public financial management, key reforms include:

- a) Introduction of Medium Term Expenditure Framework (MTEF) Budgeting process
- b) Ministerial Public Expenditure Reviews (MPERs)
- c) Integrated Financial Management Information System (IFMIS)
- d) Strengthening of Internal Audit Department
- e) Establishment of the Kenya National Audit Office (KNAO)
- f) Enactment of Government Financial Management Act, 2005
- g) Amendment of The Exchequer and Audit Act (Procurement Regulations of 2001) and eventually enactment of the Public Procurement and Disposal Act, 2005.

The computerization of the Judiciary, and the Registrar-General's Offices and the strengthening of Public Prosecutions Department are some of the reforms going on in the legal sector.

The Government has also been implementing a programme to reform state corporations/ Parastatals. These include; Privatisation of non-core state corporations; Improving quality of management by introducing performance contracts in state corporations; Allowing operational autonomy for boards to appoint Chief Executive Officers (CEOs) and senior manager's competitively; and Rationalization of functions of state corporations.

The Public Service Integrity Programme (PSIP), which was introduced in 2002, closely ties up with the other public service reforms. The programme;-

- (i). Addresses issues of values, ethics, and culture in the public service (trust, honesty, integrity and commitment to service)
- (ii). Seeks to address corruption at the work place by institutionalisation of anti-corruption measures such as corruption prevention plans, corruption risk assessments
- (iii). Addresses issues that affect service delivery such as nepotism, laxity in the work place, irregular promotions and recruitment.
- (iv). Addresses issues of internal controls in financial management and procurement process and planning

In addition to the above there are various Sector-wide reforms at various stages in the Energy Sector, Telecommunications Sector, Transport Sector, Environmental sector, Financial Sector, Health Sector and Education Sector. The latest of these sector-wide reforms is the Governance, Justice, Law and Order Sector (GJLOS) reforms coordinated by the Ministry of Justice and Constitutional Affairs (MOJCA).

The GJLOS Reform Programme supports Ministries, Departments and Agencies initiatives that seek to reform and strengthen the institutions for enhanced protection of human rights, efficient, accountable and transparent governance and accessible justice.

Other notable reforms include the Local Authority Transfer Fund (LATF) and the development of Local Authority Service Delivery Action Plans (LASDAPs) where stakeholders are engaged in Local Authorities' (LA's) programmes; and the introduction of Constituency Development Funds (CDF) and the Constituency Bursary Funds (CBF)

4.3. Creation of Enabling Environment

The creation of an enabling environment is a core factor in the success of the implementation of the Plan. Corruption will be curbed and prevented through legal mechanisms and appropriate legislative and institutional measures. To create that enabling environment, the priority policy action areas are as follows:

- a). Political good will with supportive positive action and rhetoric by leaders in all sectors and ranks.
- b). Parliament to review pertinent legislation to create a corruption hostile legal environment.
- c). Development and enforcement of Codes of Conduct for leaders, professionals and all Kenyans.
- d). Continuous advocacy of transparency and accountability in all sectors.
- e). Open all public tenders to unrestrictive participation and resultant awards to public scrutiny.
- f). All personnel should be properly trained, focused, performance oriented and sensitized to the need of improving productivity and services in the public and private sectors.
- g). Establish total autonomy for all enforcement agencies to enhance their performance.
- h). Provide manpower with the appropriate equipment and technology to deliver the services required.

4.4. Institution Building and Reforms

The building and strengthening of institutions is a pre-requisite to good governance. The failure of public management and governance in many countries is indicated by declining quality of services, inadequate policy formulation, weak financial management, closed decision-making leading to misallocation and misappropriation of financial resources, among many other ills. To attain the desired improvement urgent attention must be given to the following priority areas:

- a). Institutional reform and strengthening of the legal sector,
- b). Adherence to meritocracy in both public and private sectors,
- c). Re-training of staff to enhance their productivity,
- d). Review of financial management practices,
- e). Review and strengthen institutional management systems/structures,
- f). Exploit the potential which exists in collaborating with professional bodies.

- g). Training in investigative journalism to promote factual reporting and dissemination of corruption and anti-corruption information.

4.5. Strengthening Oversight Institutions

In the past, most proposals and recommendations by watchdog agencies were actually not taken seriously or implemented and consequently, corrupt activities remained unchecked. To reverse this trend, we must now strengthen the efficacy of oversight institutions through the following means:

- a). Providing adequate funding for anti-corruption activities,
- b). Staff selection strictly based on professional competence and experience, with staff already in employment assessed for suitability.
- c). Review of operational legal frameworks to enhance autonomy in discharging their respective mandates.
- d). Programme active interaction and collaboration with other professional institutions.
- e). Opening organizations to grassroots and activity level participation by the public in planning and monitoring of public expenditure.

4.6. Public Awareness/Education

In other parts of the world, high Anti-Corruption awareness levels have been known to lead to positive attitudes, beliefs and practices that give rise to a corruption free society. Catalysing broad public opposition to corruption requires raising levels of awareness of the phenomenon, its essence, workings, as well as its consequences for the individual and society as a whole. The stoking of public intolerance to corruption should result in stronger public demands for institutional changes to guarantee transparency and accountability of all administrations. To create such high level of public awareness, the following strategies are recommended:

- a). Continuous campaign against corruption including unrelenting media exposure.
- b). Workshops and seminars to sensitize journalists.

- c). Frequent integrity workshops and seminars for all sectors.
- d). Formation of anti-corruption groups, associations or coalitions from grassroots to national level.
- e). Special out-reach programmes to create public awareness in all corners of the country.
- f). Introduction of anti-corruption modules in curricula in all educational and training institutions.
- g). Empower, recognize and encourage Kenyans to speak out and act against corruption with patriotism.
- h). Adequate resources for anti corruption public awareness and education.

4.7. Prevention

Many organizations do not engage in constant appraisal of their operating systems, policies and practices. As a result they continue to operate systems that have weaknesses which provide avenues for corruption. To be able to effectively seal such loopholes and eliminate opportunities for corruption, it is recommended that:

- a). A Customer Charter be developed by each institution /organisation against which consumers can measure the quality of service rendered.
- b). Strict adherence to existing institutional and legal frameworks is maintained by all actors.
- c). Institutions regularly identify and review systems that create loopholes and opportunities for corruption and devise ways of sealing them.
- d). All stakeholders uphold their obligations set out in the National Anti-Corruption Plan, and offer peer pressure/review for their counterparts.

4.8. Ethical Standards

All our organizations need to make ethical standards-setting a priority. In corporate governance functioning with integrity and being seen to be functioning with integrity is actually about optimising the efficiency of the organisation. Research in Kenyan organisations reveals that many Kenyans do not realise the relevance of a code of conduct, which is a crucial tool in ethical standards setting. To change this situation, it is recommended that:

- a). Each organisation should develop and implement a code of conduct.
- b). Organisations and associations develop mechanisms to enforce adherence to their codes.
- c). Enforcement mechanisms must be an integral part of the codes of conduct.
- d). Organizations must regularly review and update their codes of conduct.

The elements outlined above are important for each sector and stakeholder and should be addressed to ensure prevention and eradication of corruption. Other elements, unique to each stakeholder or sector, should also be identified and addressed.

Chapter Five

Role of Stakeholders

5.1 Introduction

To emphasize again, our success in fighting corruption must have the participation of all the stakeholders. Stakeholders participating in designing the plan are drawn from the following sectors:

1. The Legislature
2. The Executive
3. The Judiciary
4. KACC
5. Enforcement Agencies
6. Watchdog Agencies
7. The Private Sector
8. The Media
9. Religious Organizations
10. Civil Society
11. Labour/Trade unions
12. Education Sector

In the process of formulating this Plan stakeholders jointly identified some key roles as described below, in addition to the specific action commitments.

Legislature: One of the principal functions of parliament is to hold the executive accountable through regular public scrutiny, parliamentary debates and questions. Parliament must continue to play this role of promoting and demanding transparency and accountability. Parliament shall also expeditiously enact or amend various governance and anti-corruption legislations aimed at establishing a concrete value system that will create a strong anti-corruption culture in the country.

The Executive/Public Sector: For the National Anti-corruption Plan to be successful, each part of society must shoulder the responsibility to carrying their identified activities. Stakeholders acknowledge that each corrupt transaction requires a “buyer” and a “seller.” The government must deal harshly with public servants who engage in extortion, bribery and other forms of corruption, but it is businesses and individuals who collude with public servants to obtain certain advantages. They, too, must be dealt with equally harshly.

The role of the Government in the fight against corruption is central to the whole process of implementing this anti-corruption plan. The Government shall facilitate new checks and balances to be established. During the plan period, a transparent and integrated system of checks and balances, designed to achieve accountability among the various arms and agencies of government will be established. Government leaders, politicians and bureaucrats must individually and collectively provide the political will to address all forms of corruption. Government shall undertake to strengthen an independent judiciary of high integrity; recreate a results-oriented and clean executive; and foster the growth of a strong civil society empowered by a free, clean and independent media.

Judiciary: The judiciary is the guardian of laws and societal integrity and therefore it is one of the cardinal institutions of good governance expected to play a most important role in the fight against corruption. The judiciary shall ensure the protection of basic human rights, which are frequently violated by corrupt individuals. The Judiciary will expeditiously complete the on-going reforms; enforce the code of conduct for its staff; and introduce and sustain transparent merit-based competitive appointments and promotions

Watchdog Agencies: The National Audit Office has been strengthened through reforms which have resulted in much more transparency and greater awareness of the extent of corruption in the country. The office will continue to exercise its principal function of auditing public expenditure in order to effectively reduce the incidence of corruption. The audit office is also expected to establish monitoring mechanisms to ensure funds are used for planned activities; carry out regular checks on institutions; and ensure adherence to laws, rules and regulations. Reforms to guarantee more autonomy, security of tenure and strengthening of systems are expected to be implemented not only for the National Audit Office but also other watchdog agencies including the Kenya National Commission on Human Rights, Kenya Bureau of Standards (KEBS) etc.

The Media: The media can play an important role in exposing corruption and building support for efforts to combat it. As a crucial stakeholder in this Plan, the media has the responsibility to keep the legislature, the executive, the judiciary and private sector carefully monitored for corruption and all malpractices. A free and independent media with professional investigative capabilities shall be a “nation builder.” By drawing attention to corruption, journalists can turn corruption from a seemingly low risk, high profit activity for those involved to one that is high risk and low profit. The media is expected to play a critical role in raising public awareness; establish, enforce and maintain high professional standards; train journalist in specialised and investigative journalism; mount media anti-corruption campaign; implement their code of conduct for journalists and establish journalist professional associations.

In summary, an active, involved and empowered citizenry is indeed essential to any anti-corruption campaign. Under the National Anti-corruption Plan, the public must accept to bear a large share of responsibility for insisting on honesty and integrity in government and business. The public should be empowered not to let anybody buy their vote; not to be induced or coerced into any form of corruption; to take action where possible and to report incidents of corruption to the authorities; and to teach their family, relatives and friends the right values e.g. integrity is good and corruption is bad.

Civil Society: Civil society refers to diverse citizens, associations, and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) who unite to promote causes or issues of mutual interest and to influence decision-making processes. The role of civil society as a catalyst for fighting corruption and mobilizing pressure for reforms cannot be underestimated. The Government is partnering with civil society to prevent corrupt practices, strengthen public institutions, and foster an anti-corruption culture in society. The partnership is expected to result in policy-oriented civil society groups that will monitor governmental and other actors for integrity, bring corruption issues onto the public agenda, and actively promote the twin principles of transparency and accountability. Civil society will also play a vital role in re-shaping attitudes, reverse public apathy and tolerance for corruption and monitoring the social and ethical performance of the public and private sector officials. Under the National Anti-corruption Plan, Civil society organizations are expected to develop and enforce own codes of conduct/professional standards, educate the public to demand quality goods and service; carry out public sensitization programmes, ensure transparency and accountability in their programmes, and participate in poverty eradication, among others pursuits.

Action Plans: The following matrices contain proposed Action Plans by various stakeholders in summary form. These Action Plans set out what individual stakeholders jointly with others in partnership pledge to accomplish, as their duty and obligation, to make this Plan succeed. It is expected that this contribution will grow as the stakeholders from different sectors refine their plans and strategies. The resultant information will be included in future editions of the Plan.

The details shown under each sector are deemed to express common problems and issues and the proposed approaches of dealing with them within each sector, and may not be exhaustive. Likewise, actors and organisations not included in the listing in this document may subsequently be included as this “mapping” progresses.

The out-lines in this Plan do not include any statements of budgetary or other resources that will, no doubt, be necessary to implement some components of the Plan. It is expected that beyond the Plan, individual stakeholders will work out their detailed strategies, complete with resources necessary to execute them.

We acknowledge that we have enough human, financial and material resources to implement this Plan. And as we realize from the sample activities we have identified in the matrices, the bulk of these activities require no financial outlays.

The majority of actions lie in the areas of:

- i) Self-regulation,
- ii) Policy and decision-making,
- iii) Legislation,

- iv) Standards setting,
- v) Enforcement
- vi) Moral rearmament,
- vii) Networking and vigilance within existing processes and activities by institutions and individuals.

The success and sustainability of this Plan will depend on the ingenuity with which each stakeholder ingests or injects it into existing systems, plans, programmes and projects to utilize existing resources and facilities. Its strength is in its simplicity. We accordingly encourage each stakeholder and individual to faithfully translate the intentions of this Plan into meaningful Action Plans in their own areas, then implement them consistently and persistently.

This Plan is the result of genuine, honest soul-searching by citizens of this country. It is our plan, home-grown. This self-diagnosis and prescription shall help us restore vitality and achieve our national aspirations. Like good medicine, it should restore health without altering the size, shape or nature of the patient or causing any aberrant growths.

The Plan is our pledge of collective and individual responsibility and commitment to the war against corruption in this country and to the restoration of high integrity and clean governance in all the spheres of our existence. Sector specific issues and concerns are presented in matrix format in the following pages.

Chapter Six

Plan Implementation

6.1 Introduction

The common factor for all the stakeholders implementing the plan is the desire to enhance public intolerance towards corruption. The plan offers an opportunity to harness the capacity of all stakeholders to establish a public-private coalition against corruption. It also offers an opportunity for the players to complement each other.

The plan provides an opportunity for actors to launch practical, action-based initiatives that can provide immediate reinforcement of anti-corruption reform efforts while also creating enabling environment for promoting practical examples and “success stories”. It provides a mechanism through which the various stakeholders can provide input and participate in both the design and implementation in a way that draws on their expertise and experiences not only for the overall plan but for individual and sectoral projects and activities.

The broad objective of this implementation plan is therefore to guide the process and provide avenues to avail or share technical support to the stakeholders. As much as the plan will provide such a frame it is intended to be as simple and practical as possible. It is expected that the activities of the plan will be integrated in the implementers’ core functions without exerting undue pressure that may hamper the implementation process.

The implementation of this Plan hinges on individual organizations. However, efforts will be made to facilitate sharing of experiences in order to harmonize plans and realize synergy.

The plan will have a simple but effective monitoring system. All implementing partners will identify and develop indices for measurement of progress and impact at an early stage and which will be the basis for the Plan’s Monitoring and Evaluation Process.

6.2. Roles and Responsibilities

6.2.1. National Coordinating Committee (NCC)

The National Anti-Corruption Plan Coordinating Committee shall oversee the direction and implementation of NACP Programmes and activities. Membership to the National Coordinating Committee shall represent key stakeholders of the participating sectors. Members of Sub-Committees shall also be drawn from the same participating sectors. Membership to these committees may be for three -year renewable terms. Members must be persons of high integrity standing in society, long experience and outstanding performance as professionals drawn from the membership of the implementing partners.

The NCC will meet quarterly or more frequently when need arises. Members shall also participate in the sectoral meetings and review meetings. Specific responsibilities of the NCC will be to:

1. Generate the policy for anti-corruption initiatives
2. Establish a code of conduct and ethics for the stakeholders
3. Enforce the code and apply sanctions
4. Set priorities and coordinate the programmes
5. Identify and mobilise resources
6. Endorse the programmes of Sectoral actors
7. Consider activities of its sub-committees
8. Guide the National Secretariat
9. Encourage formation of concrete Sectoral and Regional Networks
10. Oversee Monitoring and Evaluation and make recommendations to the Annual Review Forum
11. Provide continuous active participation and contribution to the national policy and law making processes through advocacy and or lobbying.
12. Organize integrity seminars/workshops sectorally, regionally and nationally
13. Develop and enforce a communications policy for stakeholders
14. Establish Provincial or District Committees with functions and responsibilities delegated by the National Coordinating Committee.

The basic responsibilities and duties of the secretariat and sub-committees may be delegated by the NCC as below.

6.2.2. National Secretariat

The National Secretariat shall work under the guidance of the National Coordinating Committee. The Secretariat will comprise of one National Programme's manager, sectoral programme officers, and a few support staff, who will work on full time basis. Each programme officer will be responsible for deliverables on specific sector/thematic area. They shall work closely with the Programmes Committee and other committees to ensure suitability of project activities. They will collate issues arising from the various NACP committees and present them to the NCC for guidance and decisions. The overall oversight of the Secretariat shall be provided by a designated officer of the Kenya Anti-Corruption Commission (KACC).

The secretariat will provide the necessary support to the participating organizations to ensure timely implementation of their anti-corruption project activities. The secretariat will collect/ receive data, collate and compile reports from the stakeholders. With the direction of the Coordinating Committee, the secretariat will analyse the data and provide feedback to the stakeholders for planning and implementation. The secretariat shall appropriately be located so that the NCC and KACC can facilitate its operations.

Functions of the Secretariat

Specific responsibilities of the Secretariat will be to:

- (a) Provide secretariat services to all committees
- (b) Implement decisions made by the National Anti-Corruption Coordinating Committee
- (c) Maintain a databank of the partners/stakeholders
- (d) Support Coordinating Committee in monitoring implementation of the Plan
- (e) Serve as a resource centre for the stakeholders
- (f) Provide or arrange for professional and technical support to stakeholders initiatives
- (g) Consolidate and update all NACP planning

6.2.3. Finance Sub- Committee

1. Prepare detailed consolidated budget proposals for the financial demands from all the committees and the secretariat.
2. Identify funding sources.
3. Prepare proposals for monitoring implementation of the Plan.
4. Prepare financial forecasts and reports for submission to the coordinating committee.

6.2.4. Publicity and Communications Sub-Committee

1. Prepare publicity campaigns
2. Prepare detailed campaign/activity budgets
3. Work with media houses on the coverage of events
4. Prepare IEC and promotional materials e.g. brochures, posters, stickers, banners
5. Prepare feature articles and advertisements for the media
6. Liaise with other committees and groups in preparation of detailed schedule(s) for each activity identified

6.2.5. Symposium /Forum Sub-Committee

1. Organise invitations to NACP events
2. Determine topics/papers for discussion and schedule of activities
3. Identify guests to be invited
4. Select venues for symposia and other meetings
5. Prepare event programmes
6. Identify and contact resource persons
7. Co-ordinate the publication of proceedings
8. Disseminate publications and other materials

This committee shall, after the launch of the Plan, regularly prepare and manage the NACP Annual Review Forum.

6.2.6. Programmes Sub-Committee

1. Prioritize all planned programmes and activities
2. Approve Programmes before they are presented to the National Coordinating Committee
3. Work closely with the National Secretariat to ensure approved programmes and activities are implemented before new ones are introduced.

NB:

1. The NACP committees will meet quarterly and a month or so before the Coordinating Committee meets.
2. Membership to NACP Coordinating committee and the various Sub-committees shall be representative and voluntary and carry no monetary gains.
3. It is expected that to demonstrate commitment organizations will contribute expertise and time by allowing their members to sit in NACP committees, or planning and monitoring activities as a social responsibility to this nation.

6.2.7. Sectoral Working Committees and Panels

Sectoral stakeholders are encouraged to establish active networking. This may include setting up sectoral working committees with specific roles and duties, especially to plan joint activities and sharing of information. The output of such proceedings may feed into NACP planning through the relevant NACP sub-committees.

The NACP outlines specific problem areas in the twelve sectors that are represented. It also identifies action to be taken to resolve the problems. The problems cited in the Plan have commonalities and can be condensed into five broad thematic areas. Sectors may find it necessary to develop suitable arrangements to effectively manage and coordinate their efforts in addressing these concerns that are highlighted in the NACP. Panels of experts may therefore be formed from time to time to advise sectors in the five broad thematic areas, which group together related corruption problem areas as follows:

1. Ethical Concerns
2. Legal Concerns
3. Planning and Economic Concerns
4. Information/Education Concerns
5. Management Systems and Practices Concerns.

The sectoral committees and panels may each organize meetings in the year with a view to assessing how well the thematic concerns have been addressed by the various stakeholders. Such meetings may also form the basis for monitoring implementation of their parts of the Plan. Such fora will be expected to submit their reports to the National Secretariat for compilation and presentation to the National Coordinating Committee. The same approach can be adopted for development of plans.

Plan Review Forum

7.1 Stakeholders' Meetings

A Review Forum, bringing together all stakeholders, shall be held every year. The purpose of the Review Forum will be to:

- (a) Review achievements.
- (b) Review problems or failures.
- (c) Identify constraints.
- (d) Exchange and share experiences
- (e) Identify priority areas for future action.
- (f) Plan the next phase.

7.2 Monitoring and Evaluation

We accept that for successful implementation of the Plan every sector and stakeholder must prepare Action Plans for execution within the specified time frames, with systematic and well co-ordinated monitoring and evaluation systems and mechanisms. Such systems and mechanisms will enable us to identify weaknesses in the implementation of the Plan with a view to suggesting areas for adjustment so that the Plan addresses the needs of preventing and fighting corruption in our changing society. This will enable the implementation of the plan with higher levels of success.

The Secretariat, the Sub-committees, the panels of experts and stakeholders will assist the National Anti-Corruption Coordinating Committee to monitor and evaluate the implementation of the National Plan.

It is acknowledged that the implementation periods of various Action Plans will vary. However, for purposes of monitoring and evaluation and other reporting, the time frame will be annually from the date of launch. The monitoring and evaluation process may include support consultation, mid-term review, end-term review, and a review forum, in the order in which they are listed.

Through a consultative effort and with technical support to the secretariat information will be collected and analysed for setting benchmarks. Both secondary and primary data will be collected to provide the necessary information. The process will include developing indicators and identifying sources of data including periodic empirical studies and other studies conducted with high levels of professionalism using robust design and methodology.

Research reports by stakeholders and from elsewhere will be consolidated for this purpose. Joint studies may be developed to augment this in order to generate credible and useful data to form a shared understanding of the status of governance now and in the future as the basis for our actions.

7.2.1 Dissemination and advocacy

The dissemination strategy of all implementers should be geared towards building awareness of the problem of governance and corruption and its various forms in Kenyan society by using different forms of public education, public discussion and dissemination of research findings and policy recommendations. The Coordinating Committee will publish annual NACP Implementation Report after every Annual Review Forum.

7.2.2 Support Consultations

At any stage in the implementation of the Plan, various stakeholders may require technical assistance to accomplish some of their set objectives. It is also useful to detect implementation problems before they arise and to deal with those already identified. The Secretariat, on behalf of the National Coordinating Committee, may organize support consultations for specific stakeholders to ensure that the implementation of the Plan is on course.

Before conducting the consultations, appointments will be made with the various stakeholders so that they may prepare for maximum benefit from the consultation to be realized. Preliminary findings and recommendations may be disseminated to the stakeholders on completion of consultation, while formal written reports of the final observations will be made available after the exercise.

7.2.3 Mid-Term Review

Stakeholders will conduct mid-term reviews of the implementation of their action plans. The reviews will be specifically conducted to:

- (a) Establish the implementation progress.
- (b) Identify implementation problems.
- (c) Seek solutions to the problems identified.
- (d) Correct the identified weaknesses.

The stakeholders are obliged to document the findings of their mid-term evaluations and forward a copy to the National Coordinating Committee. The National Coordinating Committee will collate all reports and disseminate the findings as a way of enhancing implementation of the Plan. At least one (1) Mid-term review should be conducted for every project or initiative.

7.2.4 Internal End-Term Evaluation

At the end of every Action Plan activity, stakeholders will conduct an internal end-term evaluation of the implementation of their Plan. The purpose of the evaluation exercise will be to identify:

- (a) What has been achieved?
- (b) What has not been achieved?
- (c) Constraints faced in the Action Plan implementation.
- (d) Priority areas for re-planning.
